Issue Goes Before Court Again Monday

Next move in the complicated British Columbia power situation arising from the government's takeover of the B.C. Electric is now slated for 11 a.m. Monday in Vancouver.

At that time the B.C. Electric will appeal an order of Mr. Justice McInnes of the B.C. Supreme Court Thursday placing the company under receivership until settlement of the law suits brought by the B.C. Power Corporation, owner of the B.C. Electric before the takeover last July.

Political and legal circles admitted today that the entire position, which includes precedent-shattering moves, was not completely clear.

These points, how

No one is allowed to appeal.

In turn the members of the opposition stated it without equivoca tion yesterday. Mr. Alan Macfar-lane asked the government members to try to square their consciences with this curtailment of the individual's rights through the due process of law. Mr. Robert Strachan, who as Opopsition Leader is an avowed champion of publicly-controlled electrical power, raised the same objection.

Mr. Arthur Turner sounded a significant warning. The bills before the House in the present instances were directed against a large corporation. But, he added, "Tomorrow it may be you."

lent organizations, the Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society has submitted a brief to the Royal Commission on Health

The brief carries considerable interest for Victoria. In this city the number of elderly people, is double that, per capita, of the national average and elderly people are prone to the ailments with which C.A.R.S. concerns itself.

From its extensive experience in research and treatment of cases and its study of procedures followed in other countries, the society suggests a plan for the orderly diagnosis, treatment and, ultimately, prevention of these diseases which might be applied on a nationwide scale

It offers three recommendations Their implementation, the brief says, would involve annual govern-mental expenditure of about $2,125,-000 by 1970

The proposals call for the estab-lishment of rheumatic disease units, with an average of 30 to 40 beds each, at, or in association with, some 25 or 30 main regional general hospitals throughout Canada at a cost of about $1,250,000 eight years

Canadian communities to which older people come for their declining years.

Modern medicine and health practices have scored striking successes against many of the acute and epidemic diseases. In consequence, the chronic diseases are making more demands on medicine. More people are being kept alive longer. Consequently it becomes necessary to take action against those crippling and painful conditions which can make the later years of life torture for the people who grow old. For that reason, says the society, the case for a priority of the case for a prio who grow old. For that reason, says the society, the case for a priority attack on arthritis and rheumatism and becomes more pressing.

Conflict

Of Loyalties

IN any ancient French cathedral there is a tomb bearing a Latin inscription which may be roughly translated as

"Yves, a Breton, is buried here.
He was a lawyer but no crook at which the people marvelled greatly."

That epitaph accurately reflects the general feeling about lawyers in the Middle Ages. They were regarded simply as clever scoundrels, tools of the powerful and despoilers of the poor. Yves integrity, among such associates, was considered so miraculous that eventually the Church canonized him and "the tomb of the honest lawyer" became a place of pilgrimage.

"the tomb of the honest lawyer" became a place of pilgrimage.

In the English-speaking world, however, a remarkable change in public opinion began in the Seventeenth Century and, by the Nineteenth, the legal profession had come to enjoy very high esteem. Its members were regarded not only as learned men but as the guardians of justice and order in the community and, in a special sense, the protectors of the rights and liberties of the ordinary citizen against arbitrary power.

Today there are disturbing signs that the wheel is turning again, that the profession is declining in public respect and confidence. A Gallup Poll taken a few years ago showed that two-thirds of those questioned felt that lawyers were more interested in making money than in living up to the best standards of their calling.

One of these problems is very old.

It is the conflict of loyalties to which the lawyer is subject-loyalty to his client, to the traditions of his profession, to the court and to the public interest. To reconcile these is very difficult, even for the most high-minded man. The other problems Dean Wright enumerates, however, are of more recent growth:

1. The growing tendency for outstanding lawyers to concentrate on the service of "big clients and big property interests," ignoring claims and disputes involving ordinary people and especially scorning the whole field of criminal law. Closely related to this, he notes the tendency in our court system for

2. As an inevitable consequence of this, the tendency for lawyers with a specialized group of clients is to adopt their clients' viewpoint rather than present an independent judgment of their own. Dean Wright cites the criminal lawyer who upholds obsolete rules of evidence because they are helpful ingetting his clients off. Another familiar figure is the corporation lawyer was a proportion lawyer was the company of the consequence of the conseque

In spite of all the effort made in recent years to convince pupils that the way to determine their progress is to measure it against their own capabilities, the kids still like to compare themselves to others—compare favorably, that is.

For that I'm grateful. It has never eemed satisfactory to me to ignore the ompetitive element in school work. If a youngster isn't anxious to rank above another, what's to give him the incentive to work to the limit of his ability? A comparative assessment of accomplishment against the child's own ability?

Perhaps that's a good measuring stick if the idea is to avoid giving a child an in-feriority complex. It doesn't work, though, with the kids I have known. They want to show superiority, and it seems to me that they'll work a little harder to do it.

A lot of my friends in academic circles tell me my attitude on this score is reactionary. Very likely it is. At the same time I've noticed in recent years a pronounced inclination to give more credit to the student who scores high marks than was the case a few years ago.

And that has produced an encouraging Some time ago, the principal of a junior high school told me with distress of an attitude too prevalent in his classes. It placed a premium on mediocrity or a stage below

My teacher friends tell me that attitude is waying now. The student who scores enjoys respect from most of his fellows. He's encouraged to extend himself, to do even better.

Part of that trend, I believe, comes from rehabilitation of the competitive element in class. Scholarship is getting recognition as a result—and where it counts most to the student who shows it, among his own fellows.

Quite possibly this is a little rough on the youngster without ability. He may be made to feel his inferiority a little more keenly. But if he hasn't got as many mental marbles as others in his age group, he's going to feel his inferiority at some time in life—and perhaps compensate for it in other socially acceptable ways. socially acceptable ways.

PARIS (UPI) - Authorities have cracked a ring of paint-ing counterfeiters who flooded continental markets with high-class imitations of Picasso, Braque and others, police headquarters announced.

Police identified the leader of the five-man group as 33-year-old Jean Pierre Schecroun, a former pupil of Fer-nand Leger, one of France's leading modernists, whom he also copied.

Police sources said the group sold 100 pictures for a total of 400,000 new francs ($80,000). Besides Picasso, Braque and Leger, the group also sold counterfeits of U.S. abstractionist Jackson Pollock, Miro Kupka and Bazaine. Schecroun was the painter

Do Birds Really Bathe?

We have all seen a bluebird he needs to dunk for reason ablashing around in a puddle, of health and comfort. He certainly seems to be tak.

A, bird of course is a tiny creature compared with us. loying every minute. He had first you might think that lng a tub for himself and enjoying every minute. He dabbles his feet, ducks down his head to wet the back of his neck and carefully washes under his wings. Some people place a bird bath in the garden to enjoy watching the little song birds take their baths and drink the bath water.

You would think a feathery bird would want to keep him self dry. After all, he cannot rub off the moisture with a is a water bird, spends an towel as we do and an extra load of water would seem to make him cold and too heavy to fly. It doesn't seem very reasonable for a bird to bathe. But he does. Once in a while ers interfere with his flight.

Must Get Ride of Insects

In spite of the daily preening a certain amount of dust dirt and grit collects among the silky feathers. Insects and warrous parasites also snuggle among a bird's feathers and maybe set up housekeeping on on his skin. The bird does his best to get rid of them. He may, take a dust bath. In this case he rustles around in a pile of sand or dirt, sifting the gritty mixture through his feathers.

But a bird prefers to bathe in clean water—and once in a while he must. He enjoys a shower under fresh, running water and a good place to watch him is in a stream of place to watch him is him to watch him is him to watch him is him to watch him to watch him to watch him is him to w

I have been asked to tell all I know about the hydroelectric power situation in British Columbia.

Fortunately, I do not know much about the hydroelectric power situation in British Columbia.

Downstream benefits have a certain appeal to those who like to go to benefits.

But upstream water is apt to be calmer, cooler, and more easily collected.

There is also the question of fish vs. power.

One salmon I happen to know rather well has solved this problem for the past five years by just staying put. "I should swim all the way down that dag-nabbed river, wear my fins down to the bone crossing the kelp-filled Pacific ocean, then swim all the way back UP the dagnabled river, just to get to where I stayted from:

nabbed river, just to get to where I started from?

"The heck with it," said this salmon. "I'm going to hang around here and enjoy all the upstream benefits a bachefor is bound to get."

So much for the fish vs. power question, and also the upstream benefits.

The downstream benefits are something else again.

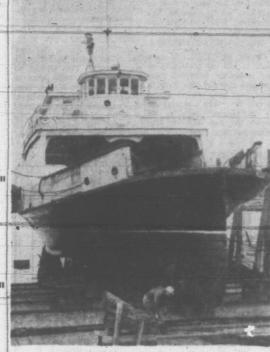

As I understand it, the downstream benefits involve er 4.5 mills or 5 mills or hardly any mills at all. This can best be answered by asking the question:

"Do you know what?"
And the answer: "He invented the kilo."
(It is not fair to ask the second question, "the kilo

But to get back to the downstream benefits. The benefits of being downstream are dublous, especially if one of the four and a half mills, or even five mills, is sawing away upstream, dumping sawdust into the river.

(This is one of the reasons my friend, the salmon, said the heck with it, and stayed way, way upstream.) Basically, though, the hydro-electric problem in British you're smart you will.

Want to make meals around the "home front" exciting front page news, by adding life to your fish menus? If you're smart you will.

Remember, the old saying, "The way to a man's heart to prough his stomach," still holds true—from the wee lads who never seem to fill up to the older types who specialize in raiding the refrigerator.

Start with basic fish. Eve seen some lovely "local" smoked fillets that sell for only 39 cents a pound.

There's nothing nicer than a fish dish prepared with fresh ling cod. Cod sells for 35 cents a pound.

Local, large, fresh, whole crabs make me long for a good feed of cracked crab on ice. Out of this world! Crabs are selling for a mere 33 cents a pound.

Now to dress these fish basics up a bit, why not use something a little different?

Eggplant is a good start and there are various ways of preparing this plant: deep fried, fritters, breaded, in casserole or stuffed in green peppers.

While shopping for eggplant I was told how to tell when one is ready for eating. Make sure it's firm because if the plant is flabby it may be bitter. Price for this delicacy is 39 cents a pound.

If you want to stuff green peppers with eggplant, the peppers are 49 cents a pound.

Small, seedless avacadoes are delicious in salad and easy to prepare. Pare, peel away outer skin and slice. These little "fellows" measure about two inches in length and sell for 59 cents a pound.

The larger more common avacadoes, when pitted and peeled, lend themselves especially well for garnishing a salad. They sell for 25 cents each.

sity Women's Club of Victoria Wednesday evening on "The Way of the Indian."

"Before the upsetting of their culture, they had a high culture of their own, a great many details of which have escaped us. With their myths, traditions, pride of ancestry, their skills in boat building, they led a perfectly happy life, and the first generation of In-dians confined to the reserva-tions did not like the restrictions on their freedom and the loss of the excitement they had enjoyed with their war parties and horse-stealing," he

The fourth generation of Indians is now living on the reservations, and many of them are psychologically ill-adapted to leave and have grown to love their homes.

Apart from the difficulties of language differences, the standards and lack of opportunities in education impose a great hardship on them. In seeking integration in the cities, they have to fight against discrimination in so-cial life as well as in employ-

"A complete and rapid breakdown of the values and ways of living of the West Coast Indians followed the arrival here in 1770 of white men who were technologically superior," said Dr. Douglas Leechman, formerly of the division of anthropology, National Museum of Canada, when he addressed the University Women's Club of Victoria

Mary Horan.

Mrs. R. E. Foster, ladies' captain, announced that a new trophy is now in competition. The Grant trophy, donated by G. Harold Grant, will be awarded to the golfer with the low net of three aggregate scores to be made during a three-day competition of medal play.

It was also announced that New Members' Day will be held Saturday, April 14 with a coffee party being held at 10 a.m. prior to play at 11.30 a.m.

The only raincoat guaranteed weatherproof even after repeated dry cleanings & washings!

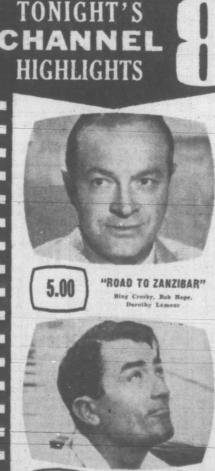

It's true. Only Macintosh makes this guarantee. For only Macintosh has Impervion-the patented chemical process that lets a raincoat remain a raincoat-even after you wash it or dry clean it. That's why more Canadians wear Macintosh than any other raincoat imported from Britain.

GUARANTEE: If Impervion loses its effectiveness, we will replace your Macintosh-free of charge! Prices start at $47.50. Ask for Impervion.

COMET THE COMPACT MERCURY

Success The 1962 Comet repeats everything that made it the success compact basn't gone of '61, but adds benefits that put it even farther ahead of the compact crowd. Comet has the fine car styling of a Mercury. Comet gives you a wheelbase 4 inches longer than most to tts provides. (You'll love the beautiful ride this provides.) No doubt about it: the new Mercury Comet is a compact-but doesn't look it or act it. And with all these extras it's still priced with anything else in the compact field. Size up Comet today!

Here's what keeps Comet ahead: 6,000 mile oil change cycle • 30,000 mile anti-freeze engine coolant • galvanized steel body parts • double wrapped aluminized muffler • super enamel finish • choice of 85 h.p. or 101 h.p. engine • automatic or standard transmission • 2 and 4 door sedans and station wagons • S-22 with bucket seats and special appointments • Dealer warranted for 12,000 miles or one full year, whichever comes first. Some items illustrated or mentioned are optional at extra cost.

It is set for a week after the Victoria Day centennial celebrations weekend.

The ride will assemble at 7.30 a.m. on Friday, May 25. at Beaver Lake Park, and will continue through to the following Monday afternoon.

First day of the ride will take in many scenic trails through the Highlands District and along the shores of Saanich Inlet over Mt. Finlayson to a campsite at Second day will see the riders move into the historic ghost town, Leechtown, and through the beautiful Sooke Lake area to the north end of Shawnigan Lake.

Third day will cover a dif-ferent route back to Gold-stream, all through wooded country, off the beaten track. Fourth day will have the Downstream benefits have a certain appeal to those who like to go to benefits.

But upstream water is apt to be calmer, cooler, and more easily collected. There is also the question of fish vs. power.

One salmon I happen to know rather well has solved this problem for the past five years by just staying put. "I should swim all the way down that dag nabbed river, wear my fins down to the bone crossing the kelp-filled Pacific ocean, then swim all the way back UP the dagnabbed river, just to get to where I started from?

"The licek with it," said this salmon. "I'm going to hang around here and enjoy all the upstream benefits a bachelor is bound to get."

So much for the fish vs. power question, and also the

So much for the fish vs. power question, and also the upstream benefits.

The downstream benefits are something else again.
As I understand it, the downstream benefits involve either 4.5 mills or 5 mills or hardly any mills at all.
This can best be answered by asking the question:
